Gaurav has been an absolute pleasure to learn from--he is by far one of the best instructors I have had at this university, regardless of field of study or in terms of discussion vs. lectures. He is extremely knowledgeable, strives to break down material so it is easily understood, presents in a humorous yet helpful way, and is always always always willing to help. Whoever he teaches next are sure a lucky group of people.

Gaurav was very good, entertaining examples and was quite adept at getting points across. Very clear agenda at the beginning and stuck with it.

However for the hand out it feels like we have 3 minutes to look over it and before most of us are through with the second questions we start going over it, which I understand because of time constraint but still seems very short time for us to try and tackle the problem. Also the challenge system seems pretty useless, if GSI's do not intend to give back points that were excessively taken off then there doesn't seem to be reason to create a challenge policy to begin with.

* The quartiles are calculated from Winter 2012 data. The university-wide quartiles are based on all UM classes in which an item was used. The school/college quartiles in this report are based on lower division classes with an enrollment of 16 to 74 students in Division of Social Sciences in the College of LS&A.

Gaurav is a great teacher, though he can slow down a little bit when teaching. Also, it is ok to use other analogies and units in class besides beer and liquor. We're not all alcoholics.:P

Gaurav is a good GSI. Always willing to meet with us if we don't understand and handles questions very well. He also tried to explain things from multiple perspectives which seemed to help if people didn't understand the first time around.

This course gives a great basic understanding about economics in the real world

Student 7
Gaurav was an excellent gsi, I have never had someone care as much as he did for the students' sake of learning. He spent a great deal of time making sure we understood and learned the material as well as answering our questions inside and outside of the classroom. Give this guy a job next year, he deserves it compared to some of the other gsis that were hired for this class.
